Sébastien Bachollet - ALAC

Coordinator: I started the recording sir.

(Paul): Very good. Thank you. All right Glen. Our abbreviated group, if you would do the roll.

Glen Desaintgery: Certainly. We've got Paul Diaz and (Barbara Steele) from the registry constituency. And then for staff we have Marika Konings, Olof Nordling, Dan Halloran and myself Glen.

(Paul): Thank you Glen. As I noted earlier, (James Bladel has sent his regrets. Okay this is going to be very short and sweet folks since we don't have quorum. We're just going to address some administrative issues for the record and then draw this one to a quick close.

Lets see. Marika has posted for us an updated draft of our initial report. I encourage all working group participants to carefully go over that. As we had already agreed in previous calls, we will not have a meeting next week at the Cairo summit.

So our next conference call will be the 11th of November. We'll implore all working group participants to go through the draft, post their comments to the - to the mailing list so that we can really hit it running when we come back on the 11th.

Our timeline necessarily is going to slip a bit. That's okay. I think we've been making very good progress and we'd rather do this diligently than try and rush through and meet some arbitrary deadline that we set for ourselves.

That said though we really do need to push through this as quickly as we can once we're back from Cairo. But we can get the public comment and call for constituency statement, get those underway.

Ideally we'd like to tray and get through these things before the end of this year. Schedule, we just push out a couple weeks; we'll still permit for that.

Discussion before the recoding started with the staff and that you for Dan - Dan Halloran for clueing us in on certain issues about (nick) registry, reporting obligations, et cetera. To that end we were going to discuss the graphic that Marika has included on Table 1 beginning on Line 400.

Again for those who are listening to this, please take a look at that. Think about what the graphic is - what information it's conveying to you. In the instance of dot name, they have a somewhat unique business model so they have two check marks.

Also in the case of dot 4, we understand that they have a contractual clause that allows them to or does not obligate them to publish registrar email even though they are thick.

With these thoughts in mind we want to make sure that we are conveying information in as straightforward manner as possible. So please everyone take a look at that graphic and lets figure out perhaps an additional column we could include that would demonstrate clearly, you know, check or not whether they do publish the registrant email or perhaps we can just rework it in some other way.

Marika has also provided for us and highlighted in blue I guess, underlined blue, the comments that have been received to date. In some cases if there was a little bit of a debate about them, everybody's comments, we will go through that. That will be first order of business on our next call.

Obviously anybody who has additional thoughts, please get them in. I'm sure Marika can get those incorporated in a new draft for our next call.

Again we're going to wrap this one up early today. Hi (Mike).

(Mike): Hi (Paul).

(Paul): (Unintelligible) to join. You know, there's only three of us and staff on the call today so we don't have quorum. I was just reading for the record so to speak if anybody listens to the recording after, you know, what to do in terms of our near term schedule.

Again we're not meeting at Cairo, so our next call will be on the 11th of November. Encouraging everybody to take another look, close look at the draft Marika's provided. Getting through that draft. Getting it ready for posting will be our first order of business when we get back from Cairo.

And again, since we don't have enough to really go through, I think we're just going to wrap this one up early today. And again, we'll encourage everybody to, you know, post any comments, any thoughts, questions, et cetera about our draft report. Lets do it over the mailing list.

(Mike): Right. So I guess it's clear that we're not intending to circulate that in advance of Cairo. We'll finish it up after (unintelligible).

(Paul): Absolutely correct. We will post keep it on our Wiki so those who are interested can at least, you know, begin to understand. Marika's very clearly labeled this draft everywhere imaginable. I think it's clearly understood that this is a work in progress. It's not ready for public comments yet.

(Mike): Sounds good to me. All right.

(Paul): All right guys?

(Mike): Thanks (Paul). Thanks Marika. We'll see you guys over there.

(Paul): Yes. And thank you everyone. Right. We will see you there and for others who couldn't join us, say if you hear any of the message, please post comments on the list and we will see you all on the 11th.

(Mike): Bye bye.

Woman: Thank you.

(Paul): Very good. Thank you guys.

Woman: Thank you.

Woman: Bye.

Woman: Bye.

(Paul): Talk to you soon.
